Top 10 Baby Books Series. 380 Puree Food Ideas for Babies Cooking for Baby.

The ULTIMATE Book of Baby Foods and Purees. THE COMPLETE GUIDE TO FEEDING BABY. Destined to become a Worldwide BEST SELLER. When and how should I introduce solid foods? Introduce solid foods when your baby can sit with support and has good head and neck control. Offer iron-fortified rice cereal as the first solid food, because it is least likely to cause an allergic reaction, such as a rash. Offer a small amount (for example, 1 or 2 teaspoons) of one new food at a time. Wait 7 days or more to see how your baby tolerates the new food before introducing the next new food. Introduce solid foods in this order: iron-fortified infant cereal, fruits and vegetables, and meats. Avoid foods that may cause choking, such as hard candy, mini-marshmallows, popcorn, pretzels, chips, spoonfuls of peanut butter, nuts, seeds, large chunks of meat, hot dogs, raw carrots, raisins and other dried fruits, and whole grapes. Do not add honey to food, water, or infant formula because it can be a source of spores that cause botulism, which can poison your baby. Do not add cereal to bottles, and do not use baby food nurser kits (which let solid foods filter through the bottle nipple along with the liquid). Your child may choke on the cereal.
